Girls in North Carolina's past encountered a lot of tough times. Can you imagine what it was like to have the British search for your patriot father? How about worrying that your town might be invaded by the enemy? Or what would you do if your brothers chose two different sides in a war? Just us to learn about girls' lives on the home front during the multiple wars North Carolina has encountered over the years. The day includes hands-on activities, games, crafts, and tours of Tryon Palace, three other historic homes, gardens, and the North Carolina History Center. Bring a picnic lunch and enjoy this special Girl Scout Day at North Carolina's first capital. Activities are designed for school-age girls; some activities will have a minimum age requirement. Individually registered girls must attend with an adult.
